ABSTRACT

This bibliography lists materials, programs and resources which appear to be relevant to the needs of parents and those working with parents. The bibliography is a project of the Parenting Materials Information Center (PMIC) being developed by the Southwest Educational Development Laboratory. PMIC collects, analyzes and disseminates information pertaining to parenting. The list is divided into major content areas according to initial classification efforts by the center staff. These major areas have been designated as: (1) academic contents and skills; (2) child abuse; (3) discipline; (4) early childhood activities; (5) education; (6) exceptional children; (7) family; (8) general resources for parenting/family/education; (9) group relationships and training; (10) health and safety; (11) large scale programs; (12) multi-ethnic multi-cultural heritage and contents; (13) language and intellectual development; (14) parent, school and community involvement; (15) parenting; (16) physical and sensory deprivation; (17) pregnancy and birth; (18) sexual development; (19) social and emotional development. The scope of each area is defined. Entries include title, author, copyright date, number of pages, price and ordering information. Type of format (such as book or film) has also been noted. INTRODUCTION

Parenting in 1976 is a comprehensive listing of the current holdings of the Early Childhood Program's PARENTING MATERIALS INFORMATION CENTER (PMIC) at the Southwest Educational Development Laboratory. This project, funded by the National Institute of Education, was created to produce an exportable, replicable information center model. At the present time, some selected materials from this collection have been analyzed, and detailed, one-page Information Sheets have been produced. These Information Sheets, indexed to a storage and retrieval system, constitute the exportable model that is currently being tested and revised. A prototype will be fully operational by July 1976.

An asterisk (*) by the title identifies items that are currently incorporated into the PMIC retrieval system, and for which a detailed Information Sheet has been prepared. These Information Sheets are available to you. They will give you a detailed description of the material's purpose, content, physical appearance, and any special characteristics. For complete ordering and price information, please see the enclosed insert.

Parenting in 1976 is the third listing produced by the PMIC, and it incorporates most of the items listed in the previous editions and all new acquisitions since June 1975. Our selection criteria have been directed to those materials for or about parents and parenting/parent education/parent involvement. The materials included are of particular interest to the general public and to practitioners, rather than to the research community. Most materials deal with the applications of research findings and concepts (the "how to's") rather than the research itself (the why's); although there are many exceptions.

The titles listed are divided into 19 major subject areas. The scope of each major area is described at the beginning of each chapter. The entries include title, author, copyright date, number of pages, price and publisher. A complete publisher's list with mailing addresses appears in the back. We have tried to provide complete addresses and current prices for the materials, although in some cases there may be changes due to project terminations, experimental versions, out of print status, etc. Therefore, prices and availability may have changed without our knowledge.

If a book is available in both hardback and paperback format, both prices are included, although only the hardback publisher is listed.

In the case of documents available from ERIC (Education Resources Information Center), the corresponding ED number has been included to be used when ordering from ERIC.

The inclusion of a title in this listing is in no way an endorsement or a recommendation of that item. The absence of any item from the list can very well be an oversight which we would like to correct as soon as possible. We are interested in increasing the comprehensiveness of the collection and ask you to help with your suggestions. Please enclose bibliographical data, publisher, price, etc., if possible.

FOREWORD

A context analysis, conducted in 1973 by the Early Childhood Program, a Division of the Southwest Educational Development Laboratory (SEDL), revealed a number of voids and needs which combined to identify a key problem in the area of parenting: parents, carepersons, and other adults involved in performing services for children need more knowledge and skill in child care. SEDL proposed to address this problem by developing and researching the effectiveness of three strategies, one of which is a Parenting Materials Information Center.

The need is to bring together existing, but scattered and little known materials for training parents and others who work with parents. The objectives are to design and develop a Parenting Materials Information Center and research its effectiveness in disseminating information about materials on parenting skills and concerns. Parenting in 1976: A Listing from PMIC is one effort in disseminating this information.
